

HUNDRED FIFTY PERISH WHEN LOADED EXCURSION STEAMER STRIKES LOG AND GOES DOWN

Panic Follows Mishap at Midnight Last Night in the Illinois River Near Peoria, Illinois, and Many are Trampled to Death While Others Leap Into Stream Without Life Preservers and are Drowned; Vessel Sinks Immediately After Pulling off Obstruction.

ESTIMATES OF NUMBER OF DEAD RUN TO 200

By Associated Press.

PEORIA, Ill., July 6.—Divers have recovered 51 bodies at noon today in their search for the estimated 150 men, women and children drowned or trampled to death when the excursion steamer Columbia, carrying 500 dancing and singing passengers struck a sunken log in the Illinois river shortly after midnight and sank quickly.

PEORIA, Ill., July 6.—Approximately 150 persons were drowned or trampled to death at midnight last night when the excursion steamer Columbia, carrying more than 500 persons, struck an obstruction in the Illinois river and sank.

The excursion party started from Pekin, 15 miles distant from here, early in the evening and spent several hours at an amusement park near this city and when the return trip to Pekin was about half completed the steamer ran into the obstruction on the Peoria shore, during a fog, smashing a big hole in her bow.

The pilot signaled full speed astern and as soon as the vessel pulled clear of the log or rock she began to settle and within a few minutes sank, carrying many persons down.

Soon after the steamer struck a panic occurred among the passengers and many men, women and children jumped into the water without securing life preservers. Those who could swim reached shore which was only a few feet away.

Ray Jones, fireman on the steamer, estimated that between 150 and 200 persons were on the dance floor when the boat struck, and he believed many of these perished. The pilot, when he found his boat was sinking, sent distress signals, and within a short time boats from various directions came to the rescue and began to pick up the survivors. The bodies recovered on account of the darkness and efforts were badly hampered.

The police of Pekin early today estimated the number of dead at 150, but Captain H. F. Nehl, of the steamer, said he believed the number of dead was not more than 100.

Search for the bodies was abandoned at 4 o'clock this morning until daylight came. Approximately 20 had been recovered, only a portion of whom had been identified.

This morning only the hurricane deck of the steamer is visible above the water.

With the break of day divers went down into the sunken steamer to bring up bodies of the hundred or more victims of the disaster believed to be between the crushed decks of the boat. One of the under-water men was George Holmstrom, who recovered many bodies from the East side when that boat, capsized in the Chicago river in 1915.

Almost at the same hour hearses began arriving from the scene of the disaster, bringing the first of the bodies of the victims. Soldiers detailed from Camp Bradley and Herring were in Pekin early to preserve order.

Coroner E. L. Clary of Tazewell county early this morning swore in a jury and left with the members for the scene. At that time 19 bodies had been identified and seven injured persons were in hospitals. All known victims were residents of Pekin or neighboring villages.

August Mehl, brother of Captain H. S. Mehl, and purser of the boat, who lost his wife, made the following statement regarding the disaster:

"The whole thing was over in an instant. I was in the cafe of the boat when the shock came. I knew that we had struck a submerged log and I heard my brother, the captain, cry out 'everybody upstairs.' The crowd rushed for the upper decks. On my return I saw my wife running ahead of me up the companion way. I followed and just as I got to the second deck the boat listed to the lee side and sank quickly. I saw my wife thrown overboard into the water. I grabbed her skirt but it slipped from my fingers. Then the boat was plunged in total darkness.

"At that time the water was up to the staterooms, immediately below the pilot house on one side and up to the base of the pilot house on the listed side."

Mrs. Herman Mehl, wife of the captain, was bleeding from a wound on the side of the head when she told her story of the accident. "I was on the dance floor deck at the time," she said. "It was all over before you could say 'skat.' When the boat listed something must have struck me on the head. I came to in the water and grabbed a handrail on the boat. I just had sense enough to pull myself in and get a life preserver. Holding on with one hand to the boat and the other to the preserver I kept afloat until some men pulled me in."

Doctor L. R. Clary, coroner of Tazewell county, sent the following telegram to the chief of police at Chicago: "Please send at once professional diver with complete outfit to

PRESIDENT OF WESTERN UNION EXPLAINS THE TELEGRAPH SITUATION

Appeals to Employees to Show Their Loyalty to the Government by Remaining at Their Posts Monday.

In explanation of the telegraph situation with respect to a threatened strike on Monday, and as an appeal to its employees, Newcomb Carlton, president of the Western Union Telegraph company, has issued the following statement:

"In order that employees may have a full understanding of present conditions it seems proper for me to say that on the eve of the formation of a Western Union Employees' Association, the government is considering taking over the telegraph lines, because of the threat of an outside organization, without membership in our forces. No one would pay any attention to such a threat, were not the nation at war. It is, therefore, pertinent to call attention to the government's point of view on outside unions as expressed by Postmaster General Burleson before the House Committee on Tuesday last, as follows:

"I have never opposed the government employees organizing but if the telegraph and telephone lines are taken over the employees should not be affiliated with any outside organization, the sole affiliation should be with the government and no outside organization should be allowed to influence their action."

"From the foregoing it would appear that the policy of the company is precisely that of the Postmaster General. When your association is formed it is proposed that the company make an exclusive contract with it under which the company's condition of employment, sickness benefits, pensions, life insurance and any other matters affecting the interest of employees. Meanwhile, you may be urged to do something foolish by self-seeking individuals who hope to improve their own position and such an individual representing a small union of about 2,000 members, largely Canadian, proposes on his own authority to call you loyal men and women of the Western Union from your work in order to defeat the association which you are about to form. I am confident you will answer this attempt by an additional demonstration of your loyalty to your government by continuing at your post of duty without fear of criticism by right-minded people."

DRYING POTATOES

Anybody Can Build This Box With a Glass Top

THE heat of the sun is usually ample to dry any kind of vegetables or fruit. Some device, under glass, should be made which can be ventilated which will help pass off the moisture. The illustration shows an ordinary hot-bed sash fitted to the top of a plain board box. In the box is a stretcher made of muslin. On the sides of the box are two incubator lamps, the chimneys of which pass through the box under the muslin and up the other side. A square metal "drum" or heat spreader is fitted into this pipe so as to give a greater radiation from the incubator lamp in cloudy, cool weather, or at night. When the sun is shining no heat will be necessary.

Owing to the shortage of sugar and the price of linoleum, the great bulk of our garden surplus should be evaporated or dehydrated. The old days of dried apples have come again. In preparing potatoes they should be sliced, as for Saratoga Chips, and when the moisture is extracted they may be put in a bag and kept away from the rats and make just as good cooking potatoes as before. The same plan can be made on a larger scale if desired.

All inquiries of this nature are referred to Dr. H. E. Horton, Agricultural Commissioner, American Steel and Wire Company, Chicago, who will furnish full instructions how to make drying plants. Dr. Horton is devoting his time to vegetable conservation and is an authority.

Insists That Frail, Nervous Women Can Speedily Become Strong and Vigorous

A Vigorous Healthy Body, Sparkling Eyes and Health-Colored Cheeks Come in Two Weeks, Says Discoverer of Bio-feren.

World's Grandest Health Builder Costs Nothing Unless It Gives to Women the Buoyant Health They Long for.

It is safe to say that right here in this city are tens of thousands of weak, nervous, run-down, depressed women who in two weeks' time could make themselves so healthy, so attractive and so keen-minded that they would compel the admiration of all their friends.

The vital health building elements that these despondent women lack are all plentifully supplied in Bio-feren.

If you are ambitious, crave success in life, want to have a healthy, vigorous body, clear skin and eyes that show no dulness, make up your mind to get a package of Bio-feren right away.

It costs but little and you can get an original package at any drugist anywhere.

Take two tablets after each meal and one at bedtime—seven a day for seven days—then one after meals till all are gone. Then if you don't feel twice as good, look twice as attractive and feel twice as strong as before you started, your money is waiting for you. It belongs to you, for the discoverer of Bio-feren doesn't want one penny of it unless it fulfills all claims.

Note to Physicians: There is no secret about the formula of Bio-feren. It is printed on every package. Here it is: Lactidin; Calcium Glycero-phosphate; Iron; Potassium; Magnesium; Peptonate; Ext. Nux Vomica; Fowd; Castilian; Phosphatidain; Oleocastin; Castilian; Kolo.

No Room in the Marine Officers' Camp for Any but Real Men

Life At Quantico Is a Strenuous One Now-a-Days, Officers and Men Preparing Themselves for "Over There."

Copyright, 1918, by The International Syndicate.

MORE SNAP there—more snap! A visitor at the first Marine Corps Officers' Training Camp at Quantico, Va., is lucky enough to be permitted to enter the camp. The way is completely blocked by Marines practicing the by-no-means gentle art of bayonetting the Hun. A lieutenant instructor goes from one pair of students to the next, criticizing their "form" in bayonet boxing. "More snap!" is his continued exhortation. Such a demand hardly seems reasonable for these men, hard, husky, happy and fit, lunge mightily at angles to drive their bayonets through small flags held at different points in the air. With the same speed and seal that would be expected of them in action, they parry and thrust as though the Kaiser himself were the objective. Besides their unwavering "snap," they show easy confidence, the confidence born only of skill and long practice.

These men are just getting the fiercest points of hand-to-hand fighting and other phases of overseas warfare, for before Marines can attend the officers' training camp they must go through rigorous recruit training, covering about twelve weeks, or its equivalent.

From the officer directing the practice come such bits of advice as: "En garde! . . . Get that hand up high when you advance with your left foot. . . . You don't have to put your bayonet through more than four or six inches. That's enough! . . . Don't take too big a lunge. If you throw your left foot, it's the big item! . . . In the English system, balance is the big item! . . . On every side are long dormitories, or "bunkhouses," kitchens, "galeries," the sea-soldiers call them—mess buildings, tailor shops, supply and stores.

buildings, countless barracks; and beyond stretch miles of fine concrete roads that disappear into the haze of the Virginia woodlands.

This officers' training camp at Quantico, which has just been opened, is the first of its kind in the history of the Marine Corps. It was established to meet the sudden need for 1,500 new commissioned officers required in the increase of the Corps to 75,500 enlisted men.

They're Picked Men, Every One. The Marine Corps follows the democratic plan of recruiting its officers from its own ranks—Marines, who have demonstrated their fitness for appointment to the officers' training camp. Every Marine in this camp is a picked man, selected from a Marine Corps post or training camp, or from a ship's guard, by a selection board, whose duty it is to recommend the most promising Marines.

Thousands of college men have enlisted in the Corps. Youth, health and "sand" are conspicuous, and should make it easy to produce an efficient commissioned personnel for the Corps' big increase.

Mystifying to the outsider at this camp is the sight of students rarely about, heads down in most soldierly attitudes, passing their periods without saluting, some of them waving their hands at their sides each time they step, going in different directions, sometimes retracing their steps. Each seems following a line on the ground, like a hound picking up a trail. It looks rather silly, but it is an important feature of training. These Marines are "standardizing their pace."

This is a preliminary step in the study of topography. To qualify as an officer, a Marine must master the study of the earth's surface, and be able to draw and read maps representing topographical conditions and showing every shell hole. Each man is given a pace "tally," picks out a given distance on the roadway, and steps it off. He repeats it until his pace is standardized.

Once a man has learned his individual pace, he may traverse the country and tell, with surprising accuracy, the distance covered. Taking notes of these measurements, he can draw a map in true proportion.

The World's Tiniest Battlefields. Close by are several Marines apparently playing in a sand box, just as most of us did when we were children. But this box is used for anything but play, though the Marines find it good sport, too. Here they arrange tiny trenches over level and hilly country, and reproduce the territory that they have covered with their pace tallies. The box is built to scale, and problems in strategy are worked out over the miniature terrain.

Textbooks are, of course, studied and thoroughly briefed. Collateral lectures are given, with the schedule posted a week in advance. French and English instructors, fresh from the battlefields of France, give black-board talks in the big gymnasium. It is inspiring to see 500 picked Marines, each looking as if he had just stepped from the proverbial handbox, and all of whom have been "through the mill" as recruits, notebooks in hand, listening eagerly while a flesh-and-blood war veteran tells what to do with a certain number of men in a given position when the Germans are advancing in superior numbers. Notes are taken very carefully, too, for each man is graded by his notes as by the weekly written examinations.

After the lectures the men shoulder their stools, form in line and march back to quarters, where the next duty awaits them. The daily events crowd on each other's heels, for this is intensive training, and every moment is precious. Theory and hand in hand. A lesson in minor tactics is immediately followed by its practical application in field work. The thing is done as thoroughly as though it were happening on German soil. There is no "stalling." It is serious business. Every man is honing with his life's hope that he will be the first of his class to apply this student work under real fire, as a real leader of fighting Marines.

Discipline Has Become Instinct. How physically and mentally alert, how morally clean, are these supermen! Major Rixey smiles proudly when he announces, upon being questioned, that not one man has required being disciplined since the officers' training camp was started. Here is discipline to the point of instinctive good conduct and perfect self-control.

There is nothing terrifying about the management of the camp. The kind, thoughtful-faced Major in command might be the dean of some great university. He is thoroughly human in dealing with the student Marines. And every Marine instinctively feels the omnipresent discipline born of sincere respect for his superiors, and love of country, and adherence to the Marine Corps motto, Semper Paratus—always faithful. These Marines who are learning to command other men have already learned to master themselves.

Enlisted "Devil Dogs" Today—Marine Officers Are Laid

This Marine Tractor Hauls a String of 3 Inch Guns

The close comradeship that marks the work of these men distinguishes their leisure hours as well. The enthusiasm, too, that sweeps them along in their studies, permeates the various forms of relaxation. Many forms of athletics, from baseball to pitching quoits, they go in for strenuously.

Highly popular, too, are the entertainments. At the enlisted men's dance every Friday night in the post gymnasium, girls from Washington and Fredericksburg entertain and dance with the Marines from 7 o'clock to 9:40. Here officers and men mingle in democratic fellowship. The Post Marine band and orchestra—made up, of course, of Marines—play alternately during these evening functions.

Plenty Of Collegians Here

The shows in the gym theatre are likewise a strong drawing card. Washington vaudeville entertainers make up the programs, and the "leathernecks" have proved that they recognize and appreciate good stuff. This is easy to understand, since of the present student-officer class of 500 Marines, 150 are college graduates, more than 200 others attended college from one to three years, and many of the others are Marines who have been in foreign service and have had broader education of travel which no university affords. It is small wonder that the entertainments have gradually attained a higher artistic tone. Walter Damrosch never had a more courteous, attentive audience than when his symphony orchestra gave a strictly classical concert at the Quantico camp. The Marines have shown that they want and appreciate the best.

Excellent hunting and fishing are found in the Virginia woods nearby. Sunday hikes through the forests, rich with moss and ferns, are popular, too, and few of the men spend that day in camp. One concrete road, perfectly graded, stretches five miles into primeval forest land, affording an easy walk through beautiful scenery in its wildest state.

The relation between instructing officers and men is notable. If a question occurs to a student, he has but to seek an officer and thresh the matter out with him. This contact between student and instructor minds is constant, and reminds the pedagogues of Newman's ideal university—two men on a log.

Veteran officers who have built trenches in France supervise trench construction at Quantico, personally show the students how to arrange sand-bags, how to build bomb-proof dug-outs, how to camouflage, how to make revetments and Gablans when sand-bags cannot be had, and tell them the principles of trench planning which guard against flank attacks and make for the greater safety of the fighters.

Road study and road sketching, a big factor in modern warfare, is another important feature of the training at Quantico. In this subject, as in practically all the others, the instructors are qualified for the present duties by actual campaign experience.

All In The Day's Chow

The health of the Marines at Quantico is good, of course. It could hardly be otherwise, so carefully has their daily life been laid out for them. And with plenty of clear, fresh, country air, and exercise both mental and physical, it is quickly realized what a problem faces the messmen in the galley. How they feed to a point of satiety these husky young warriors is a story in itself. A recent menu taken from the cook's official book will give the theme simply. Each article on the menu is served in seemingly unlimited supply. Every man is welcome to as much of anything, including the whitest of bread, as he cares to eat. Here is one day's sample of what the Marine calls his "chow":

Breakfast—Baked beans with pork, pickles, corn bread, butter, coffee, milk.

Dinner—Chicken saute (?) egg dumplings, mashed potatoes, creamed peas, combination salad, lemonade, bread and butter, ice cream, sponge cake.

Supper—Cold sliced beef, potato salad, cold beans, ice water, bread and butter.

"He begins with a bean, he ends with a bean. If he doesn't he isn't a regular Marine—But oh, what a lot comes in between!"

Some chow! Some training camp! Some devil-dogs!

Without doubt they have helped to "save the day." Everywhere they have shouldered the hoe. The appeal to produce some food has reached all classes. It has gone to every nook and corner of the land, until today there is not a city, town or village that does not boast of its war gardens. Employees of stores and factories have planted vegetable plots; and the managers and officers have gone out with them to help in the cultivation. Presidents of big manufacturing concerns and banks have led the way and their men have followed into the garden patch. Men, women and children; old and young; rich and poor; representatives of every class and condition have gone into the work of growing "ammunition" in their garden "munition plants."

One of the most inspiring examples to the people of the country was the

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS TO CANNERS!

With Hoover declaring the United States will be on short wheat rations for the next year, even if we have a heavy crop, war gardeners will now find a chance to show they mean business for the National War Garden Commission has offered ten thousand dollars in Thrift Stamps and National Capitol Prize Certificates for the best canned vegetables grown in war gardens.

The Thrift Stamps will be awarded in books half filled, each half book to accompany a Certificate. The awards will be made to canners in competition with at least five competitors at recognized canning clubs and fairs. Application should be made by such club and fair officials at once to the National War Garden Commission, Washington, D. C.

MORE THAN three times as many shells were fired by the Germans in their preparation for a recent assault than in the entire Franco-Prussian War. This shows the need for vast preparation. America must make ready quipped. "No limit" should be the battle cry of the American people. It is an excellent slogan. Just as in men, so in everything else the nation should see to it that enough supplies of every kind are on hand. To nothing does this apply with greater force than to food—the foundation upon which all other activity rests. The people of the United States should produce food "without limit." They should save food "without limit." They should take no chance of a shortage of supply. The war gardeners of the United States—the home "soldiers of the soil"—have added an enormous quantity this year to the nation's food supply. Reports to the National War Garden Commission show that there are more than 5,000,000 of these patriots at work fighting the Kaiser with the hoe. They are helping to keep the food following the flag. They have heard the call of Pershing to "Keep the food coming." If it had not been for the readiness with which these home food producers everywhere jumped into the "garden trenches," the food situation in this country and for the Allies probably would have been extremely critical.

planting of the big 400-acre war garden by the soldiers at Camp Dix, N. J. This has been followed by similar work at other camps under Colonel J. S. Fair, assistant to the Acting Quartermaster General. When everything was ready for the breaking of the ground at Camp Dix, nine big truck loads of seeds, fertilizer, plows and other supplies were rushed over from Philadelphia by the National War Garden Commission; and "the boys were off." They expect to have more than one million pounds of potatoes from their garden; and they have thirty acres of onions, thirty of beans, thirty of peas, thirty of sweet corn, thirty of peas; and small tracts of sweet potatoes, tomatoes, egg plants and numerous other vegetables.

"Camp gardens will serve more than one useful purpose," says Secretary Baker, in a letter to the National War Garden Commission, congratulating the organization on its cooperation with the quartermaster's office in getting the work under way. "The production of food at the mess door is of great importance, in that it not only lessens the army's demand on the usual sources of supply, but eliminates transportation as well. The large areas of tillable land within many of the military reservations have been regarded as offering potential food production on a large scale, and I feel that the army is to be congratulated that the utilization of this space has now taken concrete form."

"Sow the Seeds of Victory." The slogan which the National War Garden Commission has carried on its posters, and in its literature to the farthest corners of the United States, and which has reached even in foreign countries, has been the watchword. With the men in khaki leading the way and helping to feed themselves as well as preparing to fight, the men, women and children behind the hoe, "machine gun of the garden," are doing their part to bring freedom and liberty to the world. When the history of the war is written, a bright page will be given to the war gardeners of the United States.

CHAPTER XII.

Action at the Dardanelles

I made twelve trips to the Dardanelles in all, the Cassard acting generally as convoy to troop ships, but one trip was much like another and I cannot remember all the details, so I will give only certain incidents of the voyages that you might find interesting. We never put into the Dardanelles without being under fire—but besides saying so what is there to write about in that? It was interesting enough at the time, though you can take it from me!

Coming up to "Y" beach on our third trip to the Dardanelles, the weather was as nasty as any I have ever seen. The rain was sweeping along in sheets—great big drops, and driven by the wind in regular volleys. You could see the wind coming by the line of white against a swell where the drops hit.

As we rounded the point, the seas got choppy, and there were cross currents bucking the ship from every angle, it seemed. You could not see two hundred yards away, the rain it came to yarning, and for a while he had me going too. He would whisper some startling tale to us and make us promise not to tell, as he had picked it from some other ship's message, and the Old Man would spread-eagle him if he found it out. They probably would have logged him, at that, if they had known he was filling us full of wind the way he did.

He told me one time that Henry Ford had invented something or other for locating subs miles away, and also another device that would draw the sub right up to it and swallow it whole. He had a lot of other yarns that I cannot remember, but I did not believe him because I saw he was picking out certain men to tell certain yarns to—that is, spinning them where they would be more sure of being believed and not just spinning them anywhere.

So I got pretty tired of this stuff after a while and when we put out from Brest on the fourth voyage I got this fellow on deck in rough weather and began talking to him about the chap who had gone overboard the time before and had been cut up by the propeller. I pretended that, of course, he knew all about it—that the Old Man had had this garby pushed overboard because he was too free with his mouth. But this did not seem to do any good, so I had to think up another way.

When we were out two days I got hold of our prize liar again. I figured that he would be superstitious and I was right. I said that of course he knew that a ship could not draw near Cape Helles and get away again unless at least one man was lost, or that, if it did get away, there would be many casualties aboard. I said it had always been that way and claimed that the Old Man had pushed this garby overboard because someone had to go. I said on our other trips no one had been sacrificed and that was the reason we had suffered so much, and that the Old Man had been called down by the French minister of the navy. I told him the Old Man would pick on whatever garby he thought he could best spare.

That was all I had to tell him. Either he thought the Old Man knew of his yarning or else he did not think himself of much account, for he did not appear that very watch and we did not see him again until we were on the homeward voyage and a steward happened to dip into a provision hold. There was our lying friend, with a life belt on, another under his head, and the light of a rope around his waist, fast asleep. Why I had the rope I do not know, but he was scared to death and thought we were going to chuck him overboard at once. I think he must have told the officers everything, because I noticed them looking pretty hard at me—or at least I thought I did, maybe it was my conscience, if I may brag about having one—and I thought one of the lieutenants was just about to grin at me several times but we never heard any more about it, or any more yarns from our wireless friend.

The fourth voyage was pretty rough, too. The old girl would stick her nose into the seas and many times I thought she would forget to come out. We had a lot of sand piled up against the wheelhouse and after we dived pretty deep one time and bucked out slowly there was not a grain of sand left. It looked like the sea was just kidding us, for we were almost in quiet water, and here it had just taken one sea aboard to clean up the sand we carried all the way from Brest.

During the whole voyage you could not get near the galley, which was where our wireless friend hung out when he could. The pans and dishes hanging on the wall stood straight out when the ship pitched, and several heavy ones came down on a cook's head while he was sitting under them during a heavy sea. That made him superstitious, too, and he disappeared and was not found for two days. But he was a landsman and not used to heavy weather.

When we got to the Gallipoli peninsula the fifth time our battle fleet and transports lay off the straits. We could not reach the little harbor on the Turkish coast, but the whole fleet felt happy and fairly confident of victory. We lay off Cape Helles and it was there we received the news that there were submarines lying around Gibraltar. Then they were reported off Malta. We got the news from British trawlers and transports. Our officers said the subs could not reach the Dardanelles without putting in somewhere for a fresh supply of fuel and that the allied fleets were on the lookout at every place where the subs might try to put in. But they got there just the same.

Then the British superdreadnaught Queen Elizabeth, "the terror of the Turks," came in. She left England with a whole fleet of cruisers and destroyers, and all the Limeys said, "She'll get through. Nothing will stop her."

One of the boys aboard of her told me he had no idea the Dardanelles would be as hot a place as he found it was. "Gaw blimey," he said "what with dodging shells and submarines, you can't 'elp but run onto a bloomin' mine. He don't mind tellin' you" he said, "that H. M. was scared cold at first. And then H. M. thinks of what Oly Oly (the chaplain) told us one service. 'His times of danger, look upwards,' he says. So H. M. looks upwards and blimey H. M. there wasn't a bloody plane-droppin' bomb on us. 'What price hopward looks Oly Oly I sing out but he weren't nowhere near. Blast me, there weren't nowhere you could look without doin' yer bloody heys a dirty trick."

When the Queen Elizabeth entered the Dardanelles, the Turkish batteries on both shores opened right on her. They had ideal positions and they were banging away in great style. And the water was simply thick with mines, and for all anybody knew with subs.

Yet the old Lizzie sailed right along, with her band up on the main deck playing, "Everybody's Doing It." It made you feel shivery along the spine, and believe me, they got a great hand from the whole fleet.

They say her Old Man told the boys he was going to drive right ahead and that if the ship was sunk he would know that the enemy was somewhere in the vicinity. Well, they were headed right, but they never got past the Narrows. They stuck until the last minute though, and those who went up, went up with the right spirit. "Are we downhearted?" they would yell "No!" And they were not, either. They did not brag when they put it over on the Turks and they did not grouch when they saw that their Red Caps had made mistakes. Their motto was, "Try again," and they tried day after day. I do not know much about the histories of armies but I do not believe there was ever an army like that of the allies in the Gallipoli campaign, and I do not think any other army could have done what they did. I take off my hat to the British army and navy after that.

It was hotter than I have ever known it to be elsewhere, and there was no water for the boys—there but what the navy brought to them—sometimes a pint a day, and often none at all. The Turks had positions that you could not expect any army to take, were well supplied with ammunition and were used to the country and the climate. Most of the British army were green troops. It was the Anzac first campaign.

They were wonderful boys, these Australians and New Zealanders. Great big men, all of them, and finely built, and they fought like devils. It was hard to-hand work half the time. hardly any sleep no water, sometimes no food. They made a mark there at Gallipoli that the world will have to go some to beat.

Our boys were on the job, too. We held our part of the work until the time came for everybody to quit, and it was no picnic. The French should be very proud of the work their navy did there in the Dardanelles.

IMPROVED PHONE SERVICE FOR THE I. C. V. ASSURED

Laurel Hill and Connellsville-Springfield Companies Merge.

CENTRAL AT INDIAN HEAD

"Laurel Hill Telephone News," in First Issue, Promises Extensions of Service and Betterment of Conditions; the Company Incorporates.

Issue No. 1 of the "Laurel Hill Telephone News," from the press of The Courier and in the interest of the Laurel Hill Telephone company, the news of which permeate the Indian creek valley and adjacent territory, has made its appearance, and a breezy little booklet it is, containing much in the way of suggestions to the subscribers and matter of educational and general interest to all. In addition it contains a directory.

Recently merged with the Connellsville-Springfield Telephone company, the Laurel Hill Telephone company is in the stage of transition from a business association to a public service corporation, and a strong effort is being made to put the system on a basis where it will meet the demands of the rapidly developing business activities of the Indian creek valley.

The company has been incorporated with a capital of $25,000. There are more than 180 stockholders. W. G. Hostetter of Champion, is president; Leroy Stauffer, Acme, secretary; I. S. Miller, Champion, treasurer, and W. J. Hamilton, Indian Head, general manager. Walter J. Miller, Wesley G. Hostetter, Irwin S. Miller, Jeremiah B. Brown and Leroy Stauffer compose the directorate.

Since Indian Head bids fair to become the center of development of the Indian creek valley coal field, it has been selected as the principal office or exchange. Connection is made with Connellsville through the Bell system, with the Citizens Telephone company, Keokuk, by way of Acme; with the Economy Telephone company, Rockwood, by way of Trent, and with the Ligonier Valley Telephone company, Staibstown, by way of Champion. Beginning June 20 the rule requiring that subscribers call by numbers went into effect. Beginning that date the exchange at Indian Head is reached by one long rang. The office there will be open week days from 6:30 A. M. to 9 P. M. and on Sundays from 7 to 9 A. M. and 1 to 2 and 5 to 7 P. M. Outside these hours the company charges extra for service.

Pay stations are to be established at Champion, Davistown, Indian Head, Melcroft, Mill Run, Normalville, Rogers Mill and White.

The line from Connellsville to Normalville is being rebuilt. The "News" contains valuable suggestions on how to use the telephone. One striking photographic cut shows the "wrong way" and "right way" to talk, the "wrong way" being with the face turned away from the transmitter, the "right way" with the lips close up. Appended is a table showing the effect of standing back from or turning one's face from the transmitter. Lips one-inch from transmitter lengths line 37 miles; two inches, 123 miles; three inches, 179 miles, and four inches, 218 miles.

At the Theatres

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE FORBIDDEN PATH"—A five-part Fox attraction, in which Theda Bara, the famous screen star, is seen in the leading role, is being shown today. Mary Lynde, the role in which Miss Bara is seen, is the daughter of poor parents, who have lived in the Greenwich village neighborhood for many years. The daughter, an only child, has been brought up in a narrow and Puritanical atmosphere, and taught to frown upon everything smacking of the worldly. Always of a sympathetic nature Mary is a great favorite with the smaller children of the neighborhood, and when on an errand for her mother never fails to see her little friends. During one of these errands she meets an artist, Felix Bonavente, who has been commissioned by William Sinclair, a millionaire philanthropist, to paint a picture of the Madonna for a new parish house. He asks the beautiful girl to pose as the model. From a guileless, innocent girl she is dragged down to the depths, becoming an habitue of a low drinking dive and then again the revengeful woman. Miss Bara's interpretation of the role of Mary Lynde is one of the masterpieces which the screen gives us only too seldom. A selected comedy is included. Monday, May Allison will be featured in "The Winning of Beatrice," a five-part Metro feature. Irene Castle will appear Tuesday in an interesting attraction, "A Splendid Sinner," starring Mary Garden, will be shown soon.

ORPHEUM THEATRE.

"THE WORLD FOR SALE"—Featuring Conway Tearle and Ann Little, will be shown again today. Also "To-Do," in his new rib tickler, a Pathe comedy. Monday and Tuesday, Douglas Fairbanks in the Artcraft production, "Mr. Fixit." In this interesting subject Fairbanks will be seen as a young society man, whose hobby is to be happy and to bring happiness to others. The scenes of "Mr. Fixit" transpire in the slums of New York, as well as in the home of a wealthy New York family, which is divided by the bickerings and petty jealousies of its members. In adjusting the heart affairs of two young women, both of whom are engaged contrary to their wishes, some very amusing complications arise, of which Fairbanks makes the most.
